EULOGY

The tree man came today.
He said, “That old tree’s gotta go.
She’s like to fall on your house.”
And so,
Reluctantly,
We signed your life away.

Your feathered mourners watched you borne away.
They cocked their heads and chirruped after you.
They’ll miss your quiet comfort every day.
Me too.

2006