MY BROTHER'S KEEPER

It wasn't just about the guns.
Even though they shouldn't be handed out like Halloween candy.
It was about a failed mental health system.
And it was about looking the other way
When a young man was so obviously in distress.
Everyone saw.
Yet no one reached out to get him help.
For surely only someone with the most tortured mind
Would have waged war on the babies.
And on that wretched morning
Even God must have wept
As He gathered the souls of all those little ones in His arms
Too soon.
Much too soon.
